

Quiet Reminders for Lunch October 21st, 2015

After the success of our flushing sign on the toilet, we thought we might work on some more signs. Unsurprisingly, we often find it difficult to keep our voices at a reasonable level at lunchtime (the Hummingbirds are sleeping at this time). Once Adele & Emerson decided on the message, "Be quiet at lunch," we began to think about spelling. The girls quickly agreed on "B" for "be," & asserted that "quiet" starts with a k. As we sound out the word more, Adele remembers the q. Stuck, we roam the school to find an example. Noting that we didn't have any accessible environmental print spelling "quiet" earlier that morning, Kalei had spelled it out on the magnet board for us to find. We brought it back to our workspace to arrange & transfer. Adele spelled "at" easily & swiftly but we struggled after the l of "lunch." We eventually thought to look at the menu! Adele started decorating while Emerson & Kalei looked up "quiet faces" on the Internet. We were dissatisfied with the options so we took quiet face portraits. Hopefully this will help us to keep our conversations gentle!
