

March 23, 2012. Today a small group of children was introduced to the new light table that we have made. It was an exciting new experience and made some old familiar materials seem “new “ again. Peter, Alivia Sage, Quincy, and Sky (and eventually Paisley when she got to school after her doctor's appointment) spent an extended amount of time lining up small colored tiles and building with the transparent magnetic blocks. It was a fun experience for us all!

