

Visiting the Goats November 1st, 2016

Today we went on a walk to visit the goats at the community garden on our street. We enjoyed walking over a new tiny bridge in the yard beside our school. When we arrived at the community garden, we noticed the one year old class was up near the big house on the hill where the goat's owner's live. We decided to join them and see what they were doing. When we got to the top of the driveway, we met some of the family who lived there: Keri, the mom, and Levi and Flora, the children. They had one of their goats out of the pin, so we got to pet the goats up close and feed them kudzu and hay.

Sinclair loved swinging on the family's swing set. The children also loved playing with many toy construction trucks and climbing on a real tractor.

Levi, pictured left in blue, and his sister Flora, pictured behind the light orange pail.

