

April 17, 2017

Watercolor is a favorite medium for the children in the Blue Room. The educators wanted to find new ways for the children to work with this type of paint, so today we experimented with splattering it onto watercolor paper and then spraying it with a fine mist of water. It created a beautiful effect and the children were fascinated with the process. Their favorite part was spraying the water and watching the way the colors bled together.

