

Brownwood Park
November 1, 2011

For those of you who have never been to Brownwood Park, it is a beautiful woody area -- you step off the busy noisy avenue that is Moreland and enter a quiet, peaceful, lovely little "forest" filled with trees, leaves, and plants. Today, James, Cruz, Henry, Nate, and Mandy went to this little oasis with the four toddlers and their amazing teacher, Kristi.

When we got there, Nate and Cruz were hungry after a morning nap. We had a little picnic as Quincy watched on, James observed the dogs walking by, and Henry found a pile of leaves to explore.

A passerby walking her dogs pointed out the new bench that was just built for the trail. Nate and Cruz happily sat in the sturdy seat after negotiating with the bumpy terrain of the trail. Henry and Sky played a game using the bench as home base, laughing all the while.

As usual, the babies are looking at the smaller details of the world around them...
